Follow the on-screen directions to complete the setup and complete the registry cleanup if needed. Fri Feb 13, 2020 I just updated the HP printer driver and now it cannot scan. I have the printer listed in the settings. I have downloaded and installed the support software. I have HP 1536dnf mfp and the support software for hp 1536dnf mfp can not find the driver. When I check for updates, it says that I have the latest driver. When I try to add the printer manually, it says the driver was not found. A: You should not do that. I mean, you have no need, and you risk to make your PC unusable (or at least to make the scanner unusable), or to damage your printer if there's no driver. Even if the scanner requires a special driver, don't try to install it, just leave it away. Use the scanner software that came with the scanner (or any other scanner software, if there is any). If you're just looking for a scan tool, the software that came with your printer (laserjet software) can be used for that. (xi) are going to be equal to the entries of  $T_f$  (and similarly  $T_g$ ). Hence,  $f$  and  $g$  will provide a basis for  $T_f \cap T_g$  and the linear space spanned by the columns in  $T_f$  and  $T_g$ . [\*\*Part 3.\*\*] Let us compute the dimension of  $T_f \cap T_g$  (again, for a non-zero element). Notice that  $T_f \cap T_g$  is a linear subspace of dimension  $k$ , since the corresponding entries of the matrices  $B_f$  and  $B_g$  are  $k \times k$  square matrices and  $\dim(T_f \cap T_g) \leq k$ . So we need to count the number of linearly independent
